

Around the world in 100 blogs: The IX15 results are out!

(Hamburg, February 18th, 2015) The blog Lexiophiles and the language portal bab.la have published the results of the 2015 International Exchange and Experience Blogs Competition, also known as IX15. The list features the top 100 blogs on living abroad.

This year's best worldwide blogs about the experiences abroad were chosen out of a pool of 300 nominations submitted by the Lexiophiles readers and the bab.la users. The ranking is based on over 5,000 votes by users from around the globe. Both the nominations and the votes were higher in number in comparison to last year's edition, showing that our users are getting more and more enthusiastic about IX every year.

The 3 Top Blogs – E-Dublin, Języki i podróże and 10 maanden naar Engeland! - are excellent examples of the joys, challenges, and great discoveries of spending time in a foreign country - or even moving there for good. E-Dublin is an essential blog for Brazilians living in and moving to Dublin and Ireland in general. Języki i podróże is a must-read for people looking for inspiration, motivation and effective methods for language learning and who are interested in travelling. 10 maanden naar Engeland features the experiences of a Dutch student going on a high school exchange in Bristol for 10 months. The winners receive a voucher for a language course kindly donated by our partner Sprachcaffe.

“We had great involvement and participation from our users. This shows that what we are doing is both appreciated and useful. We are committed to creating a global community of open-minded expats.” says Benedetta Montagnoli, the project manager of IX15. “We also had very good feedback from the winners of the previous editions, stating that the IX competition opened many doors for them. All in all, we are very happy with the outcome of this year's edition and we look forward to the next one.”
