Discover the ultimate online resources to master any foreign language with the Top Language Lovers 2017

(Hamburg, June 9th 2017) bab.la and Lexiophiles are honoured to announce the end of another successful edition of the Top Language Lovers. The competition, that aims to find the year’s best 100 online resources that any polyglot-to-be must have at hand, features language professionals and language enthusiasts from every corner of the world who are devoted to sharing their passion for foreign tongues in the online world.

Now let’s meet the champions of TLL 2017! The overall winner this year is Español Automático, which tops the ranking with its YouTube podcasts for all those who want to learn Spanish at ease and effortlessly, as their motto says. Podcasts are a growing and key method for language learning that more and more people are choosing every year and our TLL winner is evidence of this! The runner-up is a well-known face to all TLL followers as it is the YouTube channel Learn Dutch with Bart de Pau, whose amazing weekly lessons have done well in the ranking this year after having won the last edition. In third place is Universe of Memory, a blog run by a polyglot who speaks 9 languages and presents a revolutionary learning method based on improving your memory skills.

“The Top Language Lovers has proved to be once again a key meeting point for language enthusiasts worldwide” says Project Manager Mariana Alves. “Everyone can contribute in a way to reveal what the best resources for language learning out there are: our engaged participants presenting their language platforms and our beloved users with their votes”.

Have a look at the full ranking to discover tons of other great resources!

A special tribute must be paid to our amazing sponsors Pimsleur, LingQ and Caseable who are awarding the Top 10 contestants with amazing online language courses and customized laptop sleeves.

We can only thank everyone who has taken part in this new edition of TLL and congratulate all the polyglots whose fantastic work keeps inspiring more and more people to learn, love and live languages!
